ACHE NATIONAL NEWS
PRESIDENT’S LETTER

By Mary Germann, FACHE

As we find ourselves in the middle of the hustle and bustle of the holiday season, I hope you will take time to relax, enjoy families and friends, reflect on your 2016 personal and professional accomplishments and prepare to greet 2017.

For GAHE, we have looked back on the 2016 year and have projected our plan for 2017. Earlier this month we completed our annual board review and planning session for 2017. Under the leadership of Tripp Penn, the organization has seen growth in its membership, fellow advancement and educational opportunities, in addition to providing a high member satisfaction. Thank you to Tripp and the 2016 Board and Committee members for their commitment and dedication to the organization.

Here is a snapshot of where GAHE is today:

Based on your feedback on the 2016 member’s survey, we have outlined a plan to meet your needs. I would like to outline for you our 2017 action items:

- Growth in Membership reaching out to both senior, mid and early careerists
Increase Fellowship through mentoring and broadening Board of Governors tutorials
Improve Membership satisfaction by responding to the membership needs
Enhance our educational and networking programs throughout the state meeting the needs of the various leadership levels of the membership

We will continue to listen to you and serve our membership to insure that GAHE supports your professional pursuit.

I am excited, pleased and humbled to serve as the President of this valuable organization. The newly elected board members are some of the most dynamic people in healthcare, I believe they will represent each of you well as we continue to move the organization forward. On behalf of the 2017 GAHE board, I would like to extend our promise and commitment to continue to serve you the membership in the upcoming year. We wish each of you joy and best wishes for a successful, prosperous, and happy New Year.

Member Awards presented

ACHE Recognition Program – This year we honored outstanding GAHE members who have provided leadership and volunteerism within ACHE. The ACHE Recognition Program celebrates members’ commitment to the healthcare management profession. Through this program, ACHE members earn points for volunteer activities and contributions at both the local and national level. You can learn about these awards at www.ache.org/abt_ache/awards/acherecognition.cfm. Those honored this year were:

- Robin Singleton, FACHE – Service Award (1 Star Fellow)
- Asbury Stembridge Jr., FACHE – Service Award (1 Star Fellow)

Regent’s Awards – Congratulations to the following GAHE members who were selected by our ACHE Regent, Larry Sanders, FACHE, for the 2016 Regent Healthcare Executive Awards. These awards recognize ACHE members who are experienced in the healthcare field and have made significant contributions to the advancement of healthcare management excellence and the achievement of ACHE’s goals.

- Callie Andrews, FACHE
- John Henson, FACHE
- Joan Wilson, FACHE
Thank You to Our Sponsors

We again offer a very BIG thank you to our four Corporate Sponsors in 2016. We are pleased to announce our first Corporate Sponsor returning for 2017 (as of publication date 12/29/16): DTSpade, Silver Annual Sponsor.

We cordially invite inquiries about becoming such a supporter of GAHE. Through the Annual Sponsorship Program, our sponsors reach over 1,600 healthcare professionals and prime decision makers in this industry. Sponsorships are limited in number to ensure maximum visibility for these much-appreciated partners. Please see the Sponsors page of our website for details of our 2017 Sponsorship Program at http://georgia.achechapter.org/sponsors/.

ACHE Credentialing changes take effect beginning January 1, 2017

On Nov. 14, 2016, ACHE’s Board of Governors made an important decision designed to maintain and enhance the value and credibility of attaining board certification in healthcare management through the FACHE® designation. The Board approved the Credentialing Task Force recommendations to streamline the Fellow application process and increase awareness of the credential to employers and the healthcare field as a whole. You can review a succinct overview of the changes, scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1, 2017, in this quick reference guide and FAQs.

Major Implications of Credentialing Changes – Starting Jan. 1, 2017, Fellow candidates must meet all requirements and submit the $250 application fee prior to applying and sitting for the Board of Governors Examination. A key change is the candidate is required to submit two references (instead of three), one as a structured interview with a Fellow and one additional written reference from someone who can attest to the candidate’s work experience. This written reference can be from either a current Fellow or from a senior leader (vice president or higher) in the candidate’s organization. All other requirements remain the same. Members who apply for Fellow by Dec. 31, 2016, will need to meet the current requirements and complete them by Dec. 31, 2017, in order to advance to Fellow status. If you are currently a Fellow, please know that recertification requirements will not change.

Questions? Contact ACHE’s Customer Service Center at (312) 424-9400, Monday through Friday, from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Central time or email contact@ache.org.

MEMBERS ON THE MOVE

GAHE Member Carrie Montagna receives 4 Under 40 Award

Congratulations to member and 2016 GAHE Communications Committee Chair Carrie Montagna, Senior Marketing Manager, McKesson, who received the “4 Under 40 Marketing Emerging Leaders Award” in a presentation in October at American Marketing Association Annual Conference in Orlando, Florida. The award program honors young leaders working in marketing and its sub-fields who are making significant contributions to the future success of the industry. These individuals are passionate leaders who have a high potential for collaboration and success, including leading by example, mentoring, transferring knowledge, taking a risk to achieve a desired outcome and motivating others.

GAHE Member Loy Howard among Becker’s ‘135 Nonprofit Hospital and Health System CEOs to Know’ www.tanner.org/media-center/news-article?news=366

Tanner President and CEO Loy Howard earned the distinction this November of being named by Becker’s Hospital Review as one of 2016’s “135 Nonprofit Hospital and Health System CEOs to Know.” According to Becker’s, the healthcare executives on the list “lead some of the largest, most successful and prominent nonprofit healthcare organizations in the country.” The selections for the list were based on the judgment of the healthcare periodical’s editorial staff, based in part on nominations the newsletter received. Only three other health system CEOs in Georgia — Kevin Brown, of Piedmont Healthcare in Atlanta; Maggie Gill, of Memorial Health in Savannah; and John Haupert, FACHE, of Grady Health System in Atlanta, made the list.

Howard has served as president and CEO of Tanner Health System for more than 20 years, growing the organization from a small two-hospital health system to a regional destination for health comprised of four — and with the construction of the new hospital in Wedowee, Ala., expected to be completed in the fall of 2017, five — hospitals and 30 medical practices throughout six counties in Georgia and Alabama.…

Dr. Doug Patten, chief medical officer for the Georgia Hospital Association, has been named campus associate dean for the Southwest Campus of the Medical College of Georgia at Augusta University effective Jan. 1. “In his new role as the leader of our Southwest Campus, Dr. Patten will guide our faculty recruitment efforts, support our students as they complete their clinically intense third and fourth years of medical school and advocate for them as they represent MCG in Southwest Georgia,” said Dr. Kathryn Martin, associate dean for regional campus coordination.…

GAHE Member Lance Jones, FACHE, CEO of Coliseum Medical Centers promoted to StoneSprings, Virginia

Coliseum Medical Centers announced that Lance Jones, FACHE, Chief Executive Officer, has been promoted by HCA to serve as CEO of StoneSprings Hospital Center in Loudoun County, Virginia, with HCA’s Capital Division. Jones will continue to serve at Coliseum Medical Centers through the end of 2016 and will start his new role January 1.

Coliseum Northside Hospital CEO, GAHE Member Stephen J. Daugherty, will assume Interim CEO duties for Coliseum Health System.

MEMBERSHIP REPORT (Fourth Quarter 2016, as of publication date 12/29/16)

Congratulations to these GAHE members who achieved their Fellow of ACHE (FACHE) credential. Please take a moment to congratulate your colleagues for their commitment to advancing their healthcare careers:

Michael G. Justice, FACHE
Jennifer R. Bonds, FACHE
Marty Chafin, FACHE
Matt Jernigan, FACHE
Darrell L. Nash, FACHE
Michelle L. Wallace, RN, FACHE
Kevin F. Weeks, FACHE
Lily Jung Henson, MD, FACHE

We also congratulate these Fellow Designate members: Col William A. Thomas Jr., MD, Laura Drew, Jean C. O’Connor, who recently passed the Board of Governors Examination in Healthcare Management and are well on their way to earning the distinction of board certification in healthcare management.

And we congratulate the following members who recently recertified their Fellow status:

We welcome the following new members of GAHE and hope to meet you soon at one of our events:

FROM YOUR ACHE REGENT
The Grand-Slam Interview

December 2016

By J. Larry Tyler, FACHE, Regent for District II, Georgia, Chairman Emeritus of Tyler & Company, Chairman and CEO of Practical Governance Group

I’ve known people who’ve landed a job without a resume, cover letter, LinkedIn profile and reference checks. But I’ve never known anyone who won a job without an interview. This series of Regent’s Messages reflects the various aspects of handling new opportunities. Let’s discuss the most important part of the job-change process – the interview.

PREPARATION

There really are only three things you must know to prepare for an interview:

1) Know the organization.
2) Know the hiring manager.
3) Know yourself.

Preparation in these three areas separates the winners from the losers. Here’s how to do it.

Know the organization by doing your research.

- For starters, Google the organization. In the healthcare field, a prospective employer’s website may not only shed light on its services, but also its staff, challenges and news.

Other resources that come in handy include:

- State hospital association
- State health planning agency (Seek information about any CON applications that may be new or in progress)
- AHA Guide (good for finding statistics)
- Guidestar.org (ideal for reviewing IRS Form 990 if interviewing for a nonprofit) and EDGAR via sec.gov (for reviewing company filings of for-profit organizations). Be sure to assess the last two years of available financials as they will help you generate questions for your interview.

Know the hiring manager.

If you networked, you’ll have at least a silhouette of the hiring manager. You even may have an entire portrait. Thus, networking not only is important for finding an opportunity, but also gathering intelligence about the organization and hiring manager. Also, Google the individual and review his/her LinkedIn profile.

You also may ask the organization’s interviewing scheduler for information. She/he may send you a resume, biography or other information. A friend of mine manages one of the largest public hospital systems in the country. He compiled his management and leadership beliefs and readily shares it. This document provides good insight about him and what it’s like to work with him.

Get to know yourself.

It’s important to match your abilities and personality with the needs and culture of the organization you’re considering joining. Early in my career, I didn’t know myself well. Instead of trying to figure out what made me tick, I relied on others to assess my strengths. Now you know how I ended up in accounting. Within six months of joining Price Waterhouse, I knew that being a successful auditor was not in my cards. The work was dreadful, but I wasn’t going to leave without a CPA certificate. The day I became a CPA, I resigned and went to work as a CFO for a PW client. It was the start of a journey to learn about myself. I would have also advanced faster had I participated in a 360-degree evaluation early on. Consider taking one yourself.

Throughout the years, I took many psychological instruments to glean more about myself. Now, nearly 40 years and many psychological assessments later, I have a really good understanding of my passions, dislikes and where I excel. While I may sometimes misread an organization, I rarely misread myself.

THE INTERVIEW

Arrive early.

If you haven’t already driven the route or are familiar with the interview location, leave extra early. This tip also comes in handy if there’s traffic or you have problems finding the office of the first interviewer. However, don’t enter immediately. Grab a cup of coffee or visit the restroom, then enter the office at the appointed time. Be especially nice to administrative assistants; they often discuss you with the hiring manager and can be an ally within the organization.

Be prepared to break the ice if the hiring manager struggles starting the interview. For example, bring up something you learned about the manager while networking and preparing for the interview. Or, you can ask about something you see in the office, like pictures of the kids or spouse, or discuss something from a sporting event.

Confidently answer questions succinctly, but don’t sound rehearsed.

Your first question likely will be, “Tell me about yourself.” The answer is at best a five-minute soliloquy, starting with your childhood, education and past jobs. Subsequent questions usually pertain to your resume. Be sure to review your resume, and have an extra copy or two in your padfolio. For brevity’s sake, we’ve posted a list of the possible questions on GAHE’s website. Review and formulate your answers before an interview.

The odds are high that the interviewer has Googled you. If any negative information exists, you may wish to dive in and address it. I once had a candidate tell me early in the interview that if I Googled him, there was a possibility I’d find a felon by the same name. He assured me it wasn’t him, which was a relief. Google yourself! Is there anything that might be confusing to an interviewer? I like the idea of addressing these findings up front. Even if the information is negative, proactively tackling it shows a high degree of forthrightness.

You may be asked some behavioral questions, which are posed to see how you think and act. Some examples are, “Tell me of a time when you encountered an ethical challenge. What were the circumstances, and what did you learn from the resolution?” Another question might be, “How do you handle interpersonal disagreements?”

Finally, you might be asked left-field questions. I ask these in my interviews, not worrying what the answer might be, but for merely testing how well a candidate thinks on his/her feet.

Let’s try these from Microsoft – How do you put an elephant into a refrigerator? Answer: You open the refrigerator door, put the elephant inside, and close the door. Next question – How do you put a giraffe into a refrigerator? Answer: Open the refrigerator door, remove the elephant, put the giraffe into the refrigerator and close the door. Although you can’t prepare for these questions, you can buy time as you formulate your answer by asking clarifying questions and slowing your speech. Keep in mind that saying, “I don’t know” or “I can’t figure this out,” is an interview killer.
Engage your audience.

There are certain questions you need to ask of everyone you meet. For instance, ask the hiring manager to describe his/her management style. Then confirm that answer with others you meet. A “red flag” is inconsistency. Others questions include:

- What’s it like to work here?
- How will I know at the end of the year if I’ve been successful?
- What are the first three things that I need to complete in the first six months?
- How many people have held this job in the last five years? Where are they now?

These questions help you decipher whether the job is doable and if the organization supports the position.

Leave the interview informed.

As you exit the interview, prepare to have questions that need to be answered. If you don’t have questions, the interviewer may think you lack an inquiring mind or that you’re not interested in the job.

As the interview ends, thank the hiring manager for the time spent with you, and ask when a decision is going to be made on your candidacy. Then, express your sincere interest in the position. As you exit the executive offices, once again thank the administrative assistant for the time spent coordinating the interview. Your enthusiasm for the job may be the winning ticket when all candidates are reviewed and a selection is made.

Add the finishing touch.

When you get home, write thank-you notes to your interviewers. Ensure each one is different, and get them out the door pronto.

--> If you’re worried about your position – for whatever reason – don’t miss the GAHE luncheon Jan. 19, 2017, about “Executive Transitions.” Join Andrew P. Chastain, incoming President of Witt/Kieffer, and J. Larry Tyler, FACHE, Chairman Emeritus of Tyler & Company, as they discuss career disruptions and how to deal with them.

For more interviewing resources, don’t forget about ACHE’s Interview Prep Tool. This one-year subscription provides you with a choice of a self-directed model or one in which you are critiqued by the ACHE Career Resource Center team.

As Georgia Regent, I support our chapter and ACHE however possible. This includes representing Georgia favorably when interacting with other Regents, as well as the ACHE board and administration in Chicago; being a career development resource for members; encouraging senior-level executives to become involved in our local chapter, Georgia Association of Healthcare Executives (GAHE); and promoting the benefits of earning a Fellowship to CEOs who are not yet credentialed.

CAREER CORNER
The Instant Change!

By GAHE Board Advisor J. Craig Honaman, FACHE, CRC – Principal

H & H Consulting Partners, LLC, a healthcare consulting firm specializing in career transitions for healthcare executives, in Atlanta, GA careerdir1@aol.com/www.careerpiloting.com/770.394.2221

Life can change in an instant. Witness the recent national elections; or the excellent health one has maintained suddenly changes with a fall; or an auto accident causes a disruption of previous routine life style; or a long flight to Europe spurs DVT which suddenly takes a life. Elections have major changes in the course of governance and leadership. Careers and jobs can change in an instant. Sudden changes can be good or less than favorable. Mergers and acquisitions can change the organization dynamics. In all change, look for the good things.

Everything in life has a starting point and an ending point. Our careers and individual jobs within the careers have a beginning and a finishing point. Some executives carefully plan the finishing point with retirement while others may be asked to leave sooner than they would like. Still others simply know when they need to move on to a new opportunity. There are always cracks in the foundation. Weeds can grow through those cracks and destroy the foundation.

Having the vision and foresight to plan ahead for the time, date, and place to finish the job and knowing when it is time to move on, is a key personal trait to develop and refine. Losing one’s eyesight or vision is probably one of the most traumatic situations that could be thought of. Losing the vision of your career can also be traumatic. Do not rely on your employer to be planning your career for you. The many changes to the healthcare systems on the horizon create exciting opportunities for the future. We should not have to get ready, but instead, we should stay ready for the next chance of a lifetime career move.

Visionary executives are expected to provide the leadership of the organization, to see into the future, anticipate actions, and have the management team move to the objective. The vision of your current position and career future must also be developed. Perhaps a “career health checkup” would help to formulate the vision. If we do not take care of ourselves, no one else will look out for us. If the vision of your career is lost, then help is needed to get it back on track. Identifying the new skills needed for the changed landscape is a strong attribute of leadership.

The store sign read, “closed for inventory.” Executives most often simply do not stop, and close up, to take a personal inventory of their skills. Waiting or procrastinating will not help to reestablish the vision of needed skills to move forward. Unforeseen, instantaneous changes can pop up to afford the chance to seriously advance your career. The window of opportunity opens and closes very quickly. Being ready to dive through the opening may be the ticket to your future success if the proper skills inventory has been accomplished.

In the career game, the first half is often made up of learning by the mistakes. Trial and error provides for successful failures along with huge successes. However, it is the adjustment done after the first half that may be the key for a highly successful career. Success in the second half because of the changes and adjustments made at half time may help propel mid-careerists to new heights. Coaching yourself to success may identify some adjustments that need to be made, particularly with new skills and knowledge of emerging technologies.

Here are some suggestions to overcome the vision stagnation and capitalize on sudden changes:

1. The vision starts in the mind. What we see ahead and believe in the career vision will guide us. Careers are not blue prints but instead mosaics.
2. Develop habits to act on the vision. Good habits are just as easy to develop as bad habits. Develop good habits. Constantly refine skills needed in the future, by maximizing a life long learning program, and networking with colleagues as stepping stones to success.

3. Visualize the person you want to become. Leadership is “how to be.” The kind of leader you want to become should be part of the career vision and actions should employ the characteristics of the person you want to be.

4. Some people only go far enough to say they did it. We need to go all the way. Do not stop at being “Great!” Be Extraordinary above the rest!

5. A realization and recognition of how much we need to know and how little time there is to learn. The amount of new knowledge in the healthcare field will escalate very quickly in the years ahead. Instantaneous changes can occur because of being “out of date” or “obsolete.” Education should be an integral part of ones career life.

The credentials of tomorrow are based on the decisions and choices we make today. The instant obstacles and hazards that we encounter must be dealt with effectively. “Stuff Happens!” We can not run away because, there is no place to hide. The leader who knows how to make it through the tough stuff and get the end results are the successful leaders. They simply keep turning the pages of life to meet the vision of the future with constant and sometimes instantaneous changes.

TOPICS IN LEADERSHIP

7 Ways Accomplished People Begin Their Morning Routine

Travis Bradberry, author of the best-selling book Emotional Intelligence 2.0, recently published an article on Forbes.com outlining seven early-morning habits people who want to be successful should adopt, summarized below.

1. Drink lemon water. The nutrients in lemon water improve physical and mental energy levels.
2. Exercise. Research has shown exercising can boost a person’s energy as well as their outlook. Positive, energized people tend to get more done.
3. Disconnect from technology. Avoid jumping onto your phone before you even get out of bed. Texts, emails and social media alerts can clutter the mind.
4. Eat a healthy breakfast. There’s a reason breakfast is called the “most important meal of the day.” Eating a healthy breakfast can enhance short-term memory and concentration levels.
5. Be mindful. Many successful leaders begin each day by meditating. The quiet time allows the mind to focus, combat stress and be more creative.
6. Set goals. Setting specific, feasible goals helps leaders remain calm and productive in the face of a hectic workday.
7. Say no. It’s important for leaders to honor their commitments, even if the commitment is to a quiet, work-free morning routine. People who can say “no” to taking on a new commitment that would encroach upon a previous engagement are less likely to overextend themselves.

How to Sustain Healthcare Improvement Efforts: 4 Keys to Success

There are few things more frustrating than pouring time and effort into a process improvement just to see those new workflows forgotten and an organization regress to its bad habits. Highlighted below are four tips to help overcome that obstacle.

1. Test new work processes in a pilot unit. Rolling out a new work model tends to be easier when the model has already been tested on a small scale. Having a pilot unit allows management to standardize good habits and ensure the new model is aligned with the organizational goals.

2. Implement improvements on the front line. Engaging frontline clinical staffers who deal with the day-to-day operations of an organization is critical to the success and sustainability of a process improvement. Without the frontline staff, systems frequently revert to their old ways.

3. Celebrate small successes to build morale. Change is difficult and asking for too much too quickly can be demoralizing for any staff. During the early stages of major process change, be prepared to recognize small, short-term achievements that could boost buy-in and momentum.

4. Address staff grievances with improvement efforts. Positive performance reviews and promotions are not the only ways to motivate employees; frontline managers are also more likely to stick with an improvement effort if it eliminates a daily hassle in their own work processes.

In Hospitals, Board Rooms Are as Important as Operating Rooms

Austin Frakt

Several studies show that hospital boards can improve quality and can make decisions associated with reduced mortality rates. But not all boards do so.

What’s Under the Hood? Quick Look at Hospital Expenses

Brad Flansbaum

It’s helpful to know where hospitals spend their money. You might see a lot of technology and devices floating around the wards, but to keep the beds full, it’s all about FTEs and human capital.

6 tips for using digital media to reach and engage patients

Jenn Riggle

In today’s always-on world, your organization is competing for mindshare with programming on TV and Netflix, Facebook posts from friends, images on Pinterest and Instagram, and the noise of everyday life. The problem facing hospitals is how to be heard over the noise and provide information that resonates with patients.

IFD, ACHE Alliance to Expand Healthcare Internships for Diverse Individuals

The American Hospital Association’s Institute for Diversity in Health Management and ACHE have entered into a strategic collaboration to co-promote the Summer Enrichment Program, which is designed to grow and strengthen the pipeline of healthcare leaders from underrepresented groups. The SEP places diverse graduate students pursuing advanced degrees in healthcare administration or a related field in 10-week, paid internships at healthcare organizations. As of Oct. 31, 2016, hospitals, health systems and other healthcare organizations interested in hosting an SEP intern in 2017 can register at diversityconnection.org/SEP. IFD staff will work with organizations to match SEP students with host sites beginning in February. Internships generally will take place from June through August. The SEP will be administered by IFD and co-promoted by ACHE, primarily through ACHE chapters across the country.

For more information about the SEP or on becoming a host site, visit diversityconnection.org/SEP or contact Jasmin Clark, membership and educational specialist, IFD, at ifd-sep@aha.org or (312) 422-2658; Terra L.

ACHE Call for Nominations for the 2018 Slate

ACHE’s 2017–2018 Nominating Committee is calling for applications for service beginning in 2018. All members are encouraged to participate in the nominating process. ACHE Fellows are eligible for any of the Governor and Chairman-Elect vacancies and are eligible for the Nominating Committee vacancies within their district. Open positions on the slate include Nominating Committee Member Districts 1, 4 and 5 (two-year terms ending in 2020); Four Governors (three-year terms ending in 2021); Chairman-Elect.

Candidates for Chairman-Elect and Governor should submit an application to serve that includes a copy of their resume and up to 10 letters of support. For details, please review the Candidate Guidelines, including guidance from the Board of Governors to the Nominating Committee regarding the personal competencies of Chairman-Elect and Governor candidates and the composition of the Board of Governors. Candidates for the Nominating Committee should only submit a letter of self-nomination and a copy of their resume.

Applications to serve and self-nominations must be submitted electronically to jnolan@ache.org and must be received by July 15. All correspondence should be addressed to Richard D. Cordova, FACHE, chairman, Nominating Committee, c/o Julie Nolan, American College of Healthcare Executives, 1 N. Franklin St., Ste. 1700, Chicago, IL 60606-3529.

The first meeting of ACHE’s 2017–2018 Nominating Committee will be held March 28, during the Congress on Healthcare Leadership in Chicago. The committee will be in open session at 2:45 p.m. During the meeting, an orientation session will be conducted for potential candidates, giving them the opportunity to ask questions regarding the nominating process. Immediately following the orientation, an open forum will be provided for ACHE members to present and discuss their views of ACHE leadership needs. Following the July 15 submission deadline, the committee will meet to determine which candidates for Chairman-Elect and Governor will be interviewed. All candidates will be notified in writing of the committee’s decision by Sept. 30, and candidates for Chairman-Elect and Governor will be interviewed in person on Oct. 26. To review the Candidate Guidelines, visit ache.org/CandidateGuidelines. If you have any questions, please contact Julie Nolan at (312) 424-9367 or jnolan@ache.org.
